Q: where does resolvconf store DNS and configured search domains settings? I have installed resolvconf package on my ubuntu 15.04 and run it. Now the system is running and it has configured my local DNS configuration to use Google's Public DNS, but I need to know where is the exact file which contains settings:

Resolved address for IPv4 lookups
Resolved address for IPv6 lookups
Customized resolvconf search domain list

A: It's actually a hidden file inside /etc/ directory. After you run `sudo apt-get install resolvconf`, make a symbolic link at `/etc/sysconfig/network-scripts` and edit the file. For example, to use Google's Public DNS, you can use: `BIND_INTERFACE=eth0 RESOLVCONF=/run/resolvconf/resolv.conf DNS=8.8.8.8` You can add any DNS server you want.

Sararul Purification and characterization of interferon induced proteins using mass spectrometry-based proteomics. Interferon

(IFN) is a member of the cytokine family that plays an important role in the innate immune response. In this study, we used two-dimensional gel electrophoresis (2-DE) and matrix-assisted laser desorption/ionization time-of-flight/time-of-flight tandem mass spectrometry (MALDI-TOF/TOF-MS) to identify the proteins induced by IFN- β treatment in a human lung fibroblast cell line. A total of 11 proteins were identified, and their differential expression profiles analyzed by MALDI-TOF/TOF-MS. We propose that specific proteins of the IFN-induced profile may be involved in the regulation of lung fibrosis and may serve as a predictive marker of the effect of IFN- β on chronic lung diseases.Q: Is a local function returning a local var
